SECTION A: (Compulsory)

Item.1.

Kiwempe Town Council, located in Eastern Uganda, has recently faced challenges in local governance. While decentralization policies were meant to empower local councils to manage resources and deliver services, the reality has been mixed.

Citizens complain of poor service delivery, corruption in tendering processes, and lack of transparency in how local funds are allocated. Youth groups argue that leaders are more focused on political patronage than genuine development. Meanwhile, women's associations feel excluded from decision-making, despite constitutional provisions for inclusivity.

The central government has emphasized the importance of participatory governance, but communication gaps between leaders and citizens have led to mistrust. Many residents believe their voices are ignored, and voter apathy is growing.

Task

As a concerned member of Kiwempe Town Council design a write up you would present to have the challenge above addressed. (Use 400-500 words)

SECTION B

Chose One Item from the two Items set

Item.2.

In 2021, the Ugandan government through the 11th Parliament passed new taxation policies aimed at broadening the tax base, increasing revenue collection, and reducing dependence on foreign aid. These policies included digital service taxes, adjustments in Value Added Tax (VAT), and stricter enforcement of income tax compliance. The intention was to mobilize domestic resources to finance infrastructure, education, and health—key drivers of economic growth. However, Uganda remains below middle-income status, with a large informal sector, widespread tax evasion, and limited public trust in government expenditure. Many small businesses complain that taxes are burdensome, while ordinary citizens argue that taxation has not translated into improved public services. At the same time, international financial institutions emphasize that effective taxation is critical if Uganda is to achieve its Vision 2040 target of becoming a middle-income economy.

Task

Design a Research proposal to address the challenge in the above scenario. (use 600-700 words)

Item.3

"Imagine a rural child missing school due to malaria, while in the city another family refuses vaccination because of misinformation online. Why do such challenges persist despite government campaigns?"Communicable diseases remain one of Uganda's most persistent health challenges, threatening both rural and urban populations. Despite sustained government campaigns against malaria, tuberculosis, cholera, and HIV/AIDS, infection rates continue to rise, undermining national development and public health goals. In rural districts, poor sanitation, overcrowded schools, and limited access to clean water create fertile ground for outbreaks. Villagers often share contaminated water sources, and children in congested classrooms are exposed to infections that spread quickly. Health centers are under staffed, and many families walk long distances to access treatment, leading to delays and worsening conditions. In urban centers, misinformation spreads rapidly through social media platforms, fueling resistance to vaccination and treatment programs. Some influencers promote myths that vaccines cause infertility or that traditional herbs are superior to modern medicine. This misinformation erodes trust in government health initiatives and divides communities.

Task.

Write a research proposal addressing the challenge in the scenario above. (Use 600-700 words).
