RESPONSES:

NOTE: Indicators of achievement: To attain the highest level of achievement, a candidate is expected to read and interpret the Item (scenario and the task). Each response should be presented in a paragraph containing three attributes: the idea/ point (stated in sentence form). Explanation (CU), then link the presented information to the scenario (AP)

ITEM 1

(a) Examine the attributes of God revealed in the scenario above to inspire modern Christians to remain committed to God.

- God is caring according to the scenario above. (CK) In the scenario, God told Moses that He had seen how his people were being mistreated in Egypt. (CU) This inspires modern Christians to continue trusting God by praying and seeking His guidance because He cares about their suffering and challenges. (AP)
- God is omnipotent as revealed in the scenario above. (CK) In the scenario, God appeared to Moses in a bush that was burning but was not being consumed by the fire. (CU) This inspires modern Christians to keep their trust and hope in God because His power is greater than human limitations and is ready to take away all problems that seem impossible. (AP)
- God is holy and deserves reverence. In the scenario, God told Moses to take off your sandals because he was standing on holy ground. Therefore, modern Christians should worship God sincerely, live holy lives, and approach Him with humility and reverence, hence remaining committed to Him.
- God is omniscient. The scenario shows that God called Moses by name and spoke directly to him from the burning bush. Therefore, modern Christians should listen to God's word, study the Bible, and follow His guidance in their daily lives because He knows them by name and knows whatever situation they are going through.
- God is the eternal and self-existent God. In the scenario above, God identified Himself to Moses as "I AM WHO I AM*."* Therefore, modern Christians should continue trusting God in all circumstances through prayer, reading the Bible, among others, because He is everlasting and dependable.
- God is a liberator who delivers Hid people from oppression. God told Moses that He was sending him to the king of Egypt so that he could lead His people out of the country. Therefore, modern Christians should seek God's help and remain faithful to Him during difficult circumstances because He can deliver people from situations that enslave or oppress them.

ITEM 1b

(b) Analyse the forms of worship among Christians today that are reflected in Psalm 47 above.

- Singing praises to God is a form of worship among Christians today. (CK) Christians worship God by singing hymns, choruses, and praise songs during church services, fellowships, and personal worship as a way of expressing their love, gratitude, and recognition of God's greatness, which strengthens their faith and creates joy in worship. (CU)This is reflected in Psalm 47, where the psalmist calls believers to sing praises to God because He is King over all the earth. (AP)

- Clapping and joyful celebration are forms of worship among Christians today. Christians clap their hands, dance, and express joy during praise and worship as they celebrate God's greatness and goodness. This enables believers to worship God openly and joyfully rather than remaining passive. This is reflected in Psalm 47, where it says, "Clap your hands, all you peoples! Shout to God with loud songs of joy."
- Playing musical instruments is a form of worship among Christians today. Christians use instruments such as drums, keyboards, guitars, trumpets, and other instruments during worship. The instruments accompany songs and help believers express praise and joy to God. This is reflected in Psalm 47, where the psalmist says that there are shouts of joy and trumpets as the Lord goes up to His throne
- Thanksgiving is a form of worship among Christians today. Christians worship God by thanking Him for His protection, provision, blessings, and victories. Sometimes, they give testimonies or offer prayers of thanksgiving during church services. Thanksgiving helps Christians recognise God's goodness and remain grateful to Him. This is reflected in Psalm 47, where people are called to clap and shout for joy.

- Fellowship is a form of worship among Christians today. Christians gather in churches and other places of worship to praise God together through singing, prayer, thanksgiving, and proclamation of His greatness. This promotes unity and enables believers to encourage one another in faith. This is reflected in Psalm 47, which calls all people to clap, shout, and sing praises to God.

- Worship through prayer is practised by Christians today. Christians communicate with God through prayers of praise, thanksgiving, confession, and requests. Prayer enables them to acknowledge God's authority, seek His guidance, and depend on Him. This is reflected in Psalm 47 through the psalmist's direct call to praise and honour God as the supreme King who rules over all nations.

- Praise is a form of worship among Christians today. Christians publicly declare God's greatness by praising His name, proclaiming His power and recognising Him as Lord and King. This helps believers acknowledge God's supreme authority in their lives. This is reflected in Psalm 47, where it says that God is the Highest and should be feared because He is a great King who rules over the whole world.

ITEM 2

(a) Examine the significance of miracles in the Gospel of Mark to inform Reverend Emmanuel in the scenario above to carry out an effective evangelistic ministry.

- Miracles in Mark's Gospel demonstrated Jesus' divine power and authority. (CK) They showed that Jesus had power over nature and the forces affecting human life. For example, Jesus calmed the storm by commanding the wind and the waves, and they obeyed Him. (CU) Pastor Emmanuel should therefore recognise miracles as demonstrations of God's power by giving Christians a chance to acknowledge what God can do, instead of teaching them to doubt supernatural intervention. (AP)
- Miracles demonstrated Jesus' compassion for people in need. (CK) Jesus performed miracles because He cared about people who were suffering. For example, Jesus healed a man suffering from leprosy after the man pleaded with Him for help. (CU) Pastor Emmanuel should therefore encourage his members to support people in difficult situations by praying for the sick, helping the needy, among others, which will help his ministry reflect Christ's compassionate response to human suffering. (AP)
- Miracles strengthened people's faith in Jesus. Miracles often helped people recognise and trust Jesus. For example, when Jesus healed the paralysed man and forgave his sins, it confirmed His authority and caused people to praise God. Pastor Emmanuel should therefore emphasize miracles by demonstrating them through declaring healing to the people in the name of Jesus, which will strengthen the believer's faith in God.
- Miracles confirmed the message and authority of Jesus. The message which Jesus preached was supported by actions; for example, Jesus taught in the synagogue and then cast an unclean spirit out of a man. The people were amazed because Jesus taught with authority and demonstrated that authority through His actions. Pastor Emmanuel should therefore teach Biblical truth and show that the word is living by being open to God's works so that Christianity in Living Truth Church is not reduced to intellectual discussions and moral rules.

- Miracles revealed Jesus' authority over evil and brought freedom to people. Jesus delivered a man who was possessed by many demons, and after the man was freed, Jesus instructed him to tell his people what the Lord had done for him. Pastor Emmanuel should therefore allow members to share genuine testimonies of what God has done in their lives by creating time for them to stand and share with others because testimonies can communicate God's power and encourage others to trust Him.
- Miracles brought hope and restoration to suffering people. Jesus performed miracles that restored people physically and socially. For example, Jesus healed the woman who had suffered from bleeding for twelve years, and her healing brought an end to her long suffering and restored her hope. Pastor Emmanuel should therefore encourage Christians facing difficult situations to seek God through prayer and to have hope in Him, rather than making them feel that divine intervention is no longer relevant.
- Miracles attracted people to Jesus and created opportunities for evangelization. Jesus' miraculous works attracted crowds who wanted to hear and see Him. In Mark, many people gathered around the house where Jesus was teaching, and the healing of the paralyzed man became an opportunity for Jesus to reveal His authority to them. Pastor Emmanuel should therefore encourage testimonies and also demonstrate God's works through praying for those in need.

ITEM 2b

(b) Analyse how the activities of the Early Church Christians contradict those of the Christians presented in the scenario above.

- The Early Church Christians performed and believed in miracles. (CK) Early Christians experienced and witnessed supernatural acts of God through the apostles. For example, Peter healed a lame man at the Beautiful Gate, and the man immediately began walking. (CU)This contradicts the Christians in the scenario, where Pastor Emmanuel rejected miracles and taught that supernatural experiences mattered only during the early apostolic age. (AP)
- The Early Church Christians prayed for one another and expected God's intervention. They prayed for the sick and trusted God to intervene. For example, the believers prayed for Peter when he was imprisoned, and God miraculously rescued him. This contradicts the Christians in the scenario because they became reluctant to pray for the sick or seek divine intervention during difficult situations.

- The Early Church Christians shared testimonies about God's mighty works. They openly told others about what God had done through Jesus and the apostles. After the lame man was healed, the people recognised the miracle, and Peter used the opportunity to testify about Jesus. This contradicts the Christians in the scenario where Pastor Emmanuel banned members from sharing testimonies about personal miracles, causing them to become reluctant to testify about God's work.
- The Early Church Christians preached the gospel about Jesus Christ. They actively spread the gospel instead of keeping their faith within the church. After persecution broke out in Jerusalem, the believers who were scattered went from place to place preaching the word. This contradicts the Christians in the scenario, where they spent much of their time debating doctrines, criticising other churches, and discussing church policies instead of evangelising.
- The Early Church Christians lived in active fellowship with one another. They met together, prayed together, shared meals, and supported one another in their Christian life. This contradicts the Christians in the scenario, where members became more occupied with theological arguments, criticism of other churches, and church policies than with active Christian fellowship and service.

ITEM 3a

a)Discuss how the challenges faced by prophets of the Old Testament times can guide modern religious leaders when executing their work and mission.

- Old Testament prophets conflicted with state authorities and priests. (CK)When Amos exposed the moral decay of the royal house, the chief priest Amaziah accused him of political treason, reporting him to the king and warning him to stop preaching in Israel. (CU) This guides modern religious leaders to prioritize God's truth over political favor by openly preaching against corruption, murder of innocent people, among others. (AP)
- Old Testament prophets were rejected by Stubborn Audiences. When God called Ezekiel, He explicitly warned him that he was being sent to a "rebellious house" with hard foreheads and stubborn hearts who would refuse to listen (Ezekiel 2:3–7). This guides modern religious leaders to measure the success of their ministry by their own obedience to God through continuously reading the Bible and praying rather than by immediate popularity, numerical growth, or public applause.

- Old Testament prophets faced emotional trauma and deep personal sacrifice. Ezekiel suffered a traumatic personal loss when his beloved wife died suddenly; God commanded him not to weep, mourn, or shed tears publicly, using his private grief as a prophetic warning to the nation. Therefore, modern religious leaders should dedicate themselves to God's work by being emotionally resilient and placing God's assignment above personal comfort.
- Old Testament prophets faced a lot of slander (false accusations and character assassination) during their work. Priest Amaziah falsely accused Amos of plotting a military coup against King Jeroboam in the very center of Israel and ordered him to leave the land. Therefore, modern religious leaders should maintain pure personal lives through constant prayers and relating well with people so that false allegations fall apart under scrutiny.
- Old Testament prophets faced isolation and lack of institutional support. Prophets like Amos were not trained. He was a simple shepherd and sycamore fig farmer from Tekoa in the southern kingdom of Judah, sent to preach to the hostile, wealthy northern kingdom of Israel without any institutional backing. This teaches modern religious leaders to depend on God's call by constantly seeking his guidance when executing their duties, even when they are illiterate, in order to excel in their work.
- Old Testament prophets were required to perform demanding and humiliating tasks to illustrate God's message. Ezekiel was instructed to lie on his left side for 390 days and his right side for 40 days to symbolize the years of punishment for Israel and Judah. Isaiah was commanded to walk barefoot and stripped of his outer garments for three years as a warning sign against relying on foreign nations. Therefore, modern religious leaders should be willing to serve in practical, uncomfortable, and sacrificial ways by reaching out to communities in villages.
- Old Testament prophets carried a heavy burden of announcing God's Judgment. God placed the whole responsibility on Ezekiel by appointing him as a spiritual "watchman." God warned Ezekiel that if he failed to sound the horn and warn sinners of the coming judgment, the sinners would die in their guilt, but God would hold Ezekiel responsible for their blood. This guides modern religious leaders to faithfully address difficult truths by boldly demanding accountability, judgment, and moral responsibility in the community.

- Some Old Testament prophets ministered in exile Environments. Ezekiel was a refugee living in an enemy land by the Kebar River in Babylon. He had to minister to traumatized, displaced captives who had lost their homes, temple, and hope. Modern religious leaders working in refugee camps, war zones, or impoverished urban slums should offer hope and spiritual direction to people who have lost everything and feel abandoned by God by praying for them and giving them encouraging messages from the Bible.
- They faced the challenge of ministering for long without immediate results. Isaiah ministered for over 40 years through the reigns of four different kings: King Ahaz, Hezekiah, Uzziah, and Jotham, yet throughout his lifetime, he saw the nation drift deeper into moral decay and political crisis. He had to keep preaching without seeing a national revival. This guides modern religious leaders to be patient by keeping long-term faithfulness in God, who has the ability to transform people's hearts.

ITEM 3b

(b) Examine how David's early leadership style in the scenario above can serve as a model to guide modern leaders today on servant leadership

- David's early leadership style was characterized by humility. (CK) The scenario clearly shows that David began his life as a humble shepherd but rose to become a great servant king. (CU) Modern leaders should therefore remain humble even when they attain positions of authority by holding a responsibility to serve people rather than an opportunity to feel superior to them. This will create trust and cooperation between leaders and the people they serve. (AP)
- David's early leadership style united people for a common purpose, which promoted togetherness. (CK)The scenario states that David "united the tribes of Israel." (CU) Modern leaders should promote unity by bringing people together regardless of their differences in tribe, religion, etc and encouraging them to work towards common goals, which will promote peace, cooperation, and development in communities. (AP)
- David's early leadership style placed the interests of the nation first. The scenario shows that David made Jerusalem the capital of Israel, showing his effort to establish a central place from which the nation could be organized and governed. Modern leaders should similarly make decisions that promote the common good rather than concentrating on personal interests, which will lead to better organization, stability, and development in society.

- David's early leadership style valued the presence and worship of God. The scenario states that David brought back the Ark of the Covenant. Since the Ark represented God's presence among the Israelites, bringing it back showed that David recognized the importance of God in the life of the nation. Therefore, modern leaders should recognize moral and spiritual values in their leadership and allow them to guide their decisions. This will enable them to act with integrity, responsibility and respect for moral principles.
- David's early leadership style was characterized by administering justice fairly. The scenario specifically states that David "administered justice for all." Modern leaders should administer justice fairly by treating people according to the same principles regardless of their status, wealth, or influence, which will strengthen public confidence in leadership and promote fairness in society.
- David's early leadership style involved caring for vulnerable people. The scenario gives Mephibosheth as an example, stating that David administered justice "including the weak like Mephibosheth." Therefore, modern leaders should give attention to the poor, weak, disadvantaged, and marginalised members of society by setting laws that defend and protect them, which will promote social justice and ensure that development benefits a wider section of the population.
- David's early leadership style involved protecting the people he led. The scenario states that David defended his people from enemies. Modern leaders should protect the rights, security, and welfare of the people they serve so that people can live and work in greater peace and confidence.
- David's early leadership style involved recognizing that authority ultimately belonged to God. The scenario says that David was always acknowledging that the kingdom belonged to God. Modern leaders should recognize that leadership is a responsibility entrusted to them and should therefore use authority responsibly by defending the weak, being transparent, among others.

ITEM 4a

(a) Discuss the prophetic warnings in the Bible text above to inform modern religious leaders on proper service.

- Ezekiel warned leaders against using their positions to enrich themselves and exploit others. (CK) The text above says that the leaders were like roaring lions that killed people, took money and property, and left many widows through their murders. (CU) This calls on modern religious leaders to use their positions to promote justice, peace, and the welfare of their followers by handling church resources honestly and transparently. (AP)
- The Bible text above warns religious leaders against violating God's laws and treating holy things with disrespect. (CK) In the text above, the priests are accused of breaking God's law, showing no respect for holy things, failing to distinguish between what is holy and what is ordinary, and ignoring the Sabbath. (CU) Therefore, modern religious leaders should respect God's commandments and uphold their faith's teachings by conducting worship services reverently, teaching believers the importance of holiness, and demonstrating Godly behaviour in their daily lives. (AP)
- Ezekiel warned against leaders who use violence to achieve personal benefits. The text states that government officials were like wolves tearing apart their prey and that they committed murder to get rich. Therefore, modern religious leaders should promote peaceful coexistence, respect for human life, and the protection of vulnerable people, regardless of their social or economic status, by speaking out against violence, murder, human trafficking, and other forms of exploitation in society.
- The Bible text above warns religious leaders against misleading people through false messages and pretense. The text shows that prophets were accused of covering up the sins of other leaders, like someone whitewashing a wall. They gave false visions and predictions and claimed that God had spoken when He had not. This informs modern religious leaders to preach the truth and base their teachings on authentic scriptures in order to guide God's people honestly and courageously.
- Ezekiel warns against the exploitation and mistreatment of vulnerable people in society. The text says that the wealthy cheated and robbed others, mistreated the poor, and took advantage of foreigners. Therefore, modern religious leaders should support the poor, widows, orphans, refugees, and other disadvantaged groups by providing charitable assistance where possible, speak against discrimination, and encourage their communities to treat everyone with dignity, fairness, and compassion.

- Ezekiel warns leaders of neglecting their responsibility of correcting wrongdoing and protecting the nation. In the text, God says that He looked for someone who would rebuild the wall and stand in the gap on behalf of the land, but He found no one. Therefore, modern religious leaders should act as advocates for the voiceless, guide society towards righteousness, and intercede for their communities through prayer and practical action.
- Ezekiel warns that God would punish those who persisted in wickedness and injustice. In the text, God declares that He would release His anger and destroy the people because of their evil deeds. This informs modern religious leaders to teach believers about God's judgment and the consequences of sin by encouraging repentance, forgiveness, and righteous living while reminding them that their actions have moral and spiritual consequences.

ITEM 4b

(b) How can King Saul's leadership style in the scenario above guide political leaders today to practice good leadership?

- Saul misused his power when he killed innocent people. (CK) According to the scenario, Saul used his power like a roaring lion and killed 85 priests to protect his seat. (CU)Therefore, modern political leaders should protect human life by respecting citizens' rights, promoting peaceful conflict resolution, and ensuring that security forces operate within the law, thereby promoting peace, security, and national unity. (AP)
- Saul's leadership style was characterized by greed and misuse of resources. According to the scenario, Saul loved money and kept cows and property that he had been instructed to destroy. Therefore, modern political leaders should manage public resources honestly by ensuring transparency, proper accountability, and responsible expenditure, which will reduce corruption and improve service delivery.
- Saul's leadership style involved the abuse of his authority when he assumed the priestly role of Priest Samuel. According to the scenario, Saul broke God's law by performing a priest's work. Therefore, modern political leaders should respect the responsibilities of different institutions by following the constitution and allowing public officials to perform their duties independently, which will promote order, professionalism, and respect for the rule of law.

- Saul, in his leadership, failed to accept responsibility for his mistakes. According to the scenario, Saul blamed his soldiers for his own mistakes. Therefore, modern political leaders should take responsibility for their decisions by admitting mistakes, explaining their actions, and correcting failures, thereby promoting transparency, accountability, and public trust.
- Saul's leadership style was characterized by seeking false spiritual guidance. According to the scenario, Saul visited a witch to obtain false visions. Therefore, modern political leaders should seek truthful and reliable advice by consulting qualified professionals, trustworthy advisers, and relevant institutions, which will help them make informed decisions leading to national development.
- Saul's leadership style caused suffering among families. According to the scenario, Saul's actions made many women become widows. Therefore, modern political leaders should protect families by maintaining peace, preventing political violence, and ensuring that citizens receive adequate security, thereby protecting families, reducing suffering, and promoting social stability.
- Saul's leadership was characterized by neglect of duties and responsibilities. According to the scenario, Saul failed to stand in the gap for his people, leading to God's rejection of his leadership. Therefore, modern political leaders should defend the interests of citizens by addressing insecurity, fighting corruption, providing essential services, and responding to community concerns, which will promote citizens' welfare, national development, and confidence in leadership.
