P245/1 CHRISTIAN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

SCENARIO-BASED QUESTIONS AND POSSIBLE RESPONSES

IMPORTANT ADVICE TO LEARNERS

DO NOT CRAM THE RESPONSES IN THIS BOOKLET. BORROW A LEAF FROM THEM.

The responses provided in this work are possible ways of answering questions, not answers that you should memorise word for word. Learners are encouraged to study the ideas, understand the biblical principles behind them, and learn how to apply those principles to different situations.

In an examination, the scenario, wording of the question, and circumstances may be different. Therefore, do not depend on remembering the exact sentences in these responses. Instead, understand the main ideas and use your own words to construct a relevant answer.

When answering a scenario-based CRE question:

1. Read the scenario carefully and identify the main problem or issue being presented.
2. Understand what the task is asking before you begin writing.
3. State your point clearly in a complete sentence.
4. Explain the point so that the examiner can see that you understand it.
5. Relate your answer to the scenario instead of giving a general answer only.
6. Use relevant biblical examples or references to strengthen your answer.
7. Use your own words rather than reproducing memorised responses.
8. Write in clear paragraphs and make sure each idea is properly developed.
9. Learn from the examples in this booklet and use them as a guide for constructing your own answers.

A SIMPLE FORMULA TO REMEMBER

P – Point/ idea (stated in a complete sentence)
E – Explanation (detailed)
R – Relate/ link your idea to the scenario

FINAL MESSAGE TO THE LEARNER

Your goal is not to become a good memoriser of answers, but to become a good thinker who understands Christian principles and can apply them to different situations.

ITEM 1

Kyamasuka village is a committed Christian community; however, of late they experienced a disaster whereby thunder killed over 100 children, and heavy rainfall and strong winds destroyed all the crops that the citizens of the village had planted. Community members have held a meeting to move forward. One of the members is suggesting that the disaster is a serious misfortune which is suspected to have been sent to the community by someone. He is therefore convincing community members to visit witch doctors for a solution. Religious leaders such as priests and bishops have tried to counsel and guide community members, but they have failed to listen to them and instead are becoming increasingly irreligious.

TASK:

- Using the knowledge of the Exodus, guide the people of Kyamasuka village faced with the mentioned challenge to be strong in faith.
- Examine the Christian teachings in the book of Job that can be applied to comfort the people in the scenario.

Possible Responses 1a

The Israelites remained dependent on God during times of hardship. During their journey in the wilderness, they experienced hunger, but God provided manna for them to eat. Therefore, the people of Kyamasuka who lost their crops through heavy rains and strong winds should remain faithful to God and trust Him to provide for their needs rather than turning to witch doctors.

The Israelites trusted God when they faced thirst and were in need of water. When the Israelites reached Rephidim and found no water, they complained, but God provided water from the rock through Moses. This shows that God can provide for His people even when their circumstances seem impossible. In the same way, the people of Kyamasuka should remain strong in faith despite the destruction of their crops and other losses, believing that God can help them overcome their difficulties.

The Israelites were encouraged to obey God rather than follow other ways. When God provided manna, He gave them instructions through Moses concerning how they were to collect it. Therefore, the people of Kyamasuka should listen to the guidance of their religious leaders and remain committed to Christian teachings instead of seeking solutions from witch doctors.

The Israelites called upon God when they faced serious problems. When they were attacked by the Amalekites, Moses and the Israelites depended on God, and Moses prayed while Joshua led the fighting. Therefore, the people of Kyamasuka should respond to their disaster through prayer and faith in God rather than abandoning Christianity and turning to witch doctors.

Possible responses 1b

Christianity teaches Christians to remain faithful to God even in trouble. Job was a righteous man who lost his wealth, children, and health, but he kept his faith instead of abandoning God. For example, after losing his children and possessions, Job worshipped God and said, "The LORD gave, and now He has taken away. May His name be praised". Therefore, the people of Kyamasuka should remain committed to God through praying, worshipping God, and trusting Him for strength and comfort despite losing over 100 children and their crops.

Christianity teaches that suffering is part and parcel of a Christian life, even to the righteous. Job's friends assumed that his suffering was a punishment for his sins, but their conclusion was wrong. At the end of the book, God rebuked Job's friends, saying that they had not spoken rightly about Him. Therefore, the people of Kyamasuka should seek God's guidance while responding to the disaster in peaceful and responsible ways instead of accusing innocent people.

Christianity teaches that man's wisdom is limited in understanding God's ways. Job did not understand why he was suffering and repeatedly questioned what was happening to him. Nevertheless, he continued to seek God and maintained his faith. Similarly, the people of Kyamasuka may not understand why the thunder killed the children and why the crops were destroyed. They should therefore remain patient and trust God rather than concluding that someone sent the disaster or turning to witch doctors.

Christianity teaches Christians to maintain their relationship with God even in times of suffering. Job's wife told him to "curse God and die", but Job rejected her advice and continued to trust God. Therefore, the people of Kyamasuka should remain faithful to God, listen to their religious leaders, pray together, and seek appropriate practical assistance for the problems caused by the disaster rather than visiting witch doctors for a spiritual solution.

Christianity encourages patience and endurance among Christians. Job remained patient despite his severe losses and the discouraging advice from his wife and friends, and in the end, God restored everything he had lost twofold. The community of Kyamasuka should remain patient in prayer, believing that God will rebuild their broken hearts and restore their destroyed crops.

Christianity encourages Christians to welcome constructive advice during times of crisis. Job firmly rejected his wife's advice to curse God and die, as well as his friends' mistaken arguments that blamed him for the tragedy. The Christians in Kyamasuka must similarly reject the foolish advice of community members urging them to visit witch doctors for solutions, but instead stick firm in the word of God.

ITEM 2

Back in Capernaum, Jesus, in his public ministry, attracted huge crowds, making it hard to reach him. This was the situation that the four men found themselves in. However, with much determination, they had to create a hole in the roof to access Jesus. In his authority, Jesus made a strong statement: "My son, your sins are forgiven." This was not taken lightly by the teachers of the law, who accused Jesus of blasphemy because, to their understanding, it was only God to forgive sins. Jesus didn't shy away but went ahead to prove that the Son of Man has authority on earth to forgive sins and ordered the man to pick up his mat and go, which he did. To the followers of Jesus, this was great, and they praised him (Mark 2:1-12)

TASK:

- Examine Jesus' power of evangelism displayed in the scenario above.
- Explain how Jesus' apostles demonstrated God's powers during the apostolic period that relates to that in the scenario

Possible responses 2a

Jesus used his authority to forgive people's sins. Jesus demonstrated that he had divine authority by forgiving the paralyzed man's sins. For example, Jesus said that the Son of Man had authority on earth to forgive sins. In the scenario, Jesus forgave the man's sins despite opposition from the teachers of the law, showing his authority and leading the people who witnessed the miracle to praise God.

Jesus combined preaching with practical action. Effective evangelism involves both proclaiming God's message and responding to people's needs. Jesus did not simply tell the paralyzed man about God; he also healed him physically. In the scenario, after forgiving the man’s sins, Jesus commanded him to pick up his mat and walk. This demonstrated that Jesus’ ministry addressed both spiritual and physical needs, which made many crowds follow him.

Jesus demonstrated that faith is important in evangelism. Jesus recognized and responded to the faith demonstrated by those who brought the paralyzed man to him. Faith encourages people to seek Jesus and trust in his power. For example, the four men did not give up when they found the crowd blocking their way. In the scenario, they created a hole in the roof and lowered the paralyzed man before Jesus, demonstrating strong faith and determination.

Jesus demonstrated love and compassion for the needy. Jesus’ evangelism was motivated by concern for people who were suffering. Compassion helps evangelists to approach people with love rather than condemnation. In the scenario, Jesus did not ignore the paralyzed man but attended to his spiritual condition by forgiving his sins and his physical condition by healing him.

Jesus used miracles to confirm his message. Miracles can demonstrate God’s power and strengthen people's belief in the message being preached. For example, the healing of the sick can show people that God is powerful and concerned about human beings. In the scenario, Jesus healed the paralyzed man after forgiving his sins, proving to the teachers of the law and the crowd that he had divine authority to forgive sins and perform miracles.

Jesus remained confident in the face of opposition. Effective evangelism requires courage because people may question or oppose the gospel message. For example, Christians may be criticized when teaching biblical truths that others do not accept. In the scenario, the teachers of the law accused Jesus of blasphemy because they believed that only God could forgive sins, but Jesus did not withdraw his statement. Instead, he proved his authority by healing the man.

Jesus addressed the root cause of human problems. Jesus showed that human beings have spiritual needs in addition to physical needs. Evangelism therefore involves helping people to develop a right relationship with God. In the scenario, Jesus first told the paralyzed man that his sins were forgiven before commanding him to rise and walk. This shows that Jesus considered spiritual restoration important.

Jesus attracted people through his words and actions. A good evangelist can influence people by teaching the truth and living according to what they teach. For example, Christians can attract others to Christianity through their good conduct, love, and service. In the scenario, Jesus’ teaching, authority, and healing attracted large crowds, making it difficult for people to reach him.

Possible responses on 2b

The apostles demonstrated God's power through healing the sick. Healing demonstrated that the message they preached was supported by God's power. For example, Peter healed a lame man at the Temple gate by the power of Jesus Christ. This relates to the scenario where Jesus also demonstrated God's power by healing the paralyzed man after forgiving his sins.

The apostles demonstrated God's power through performing miracles. Miracles were extraordinary acts through which God revealed His power and confirmed the apostles' ministry. For example, Peter raised Tabitha from the dead. In the scenario, Jesus demonstrated God's power by healing the paralyzed man when He told him to pick up his mat and go.

The apostles demonstrated God's power through preaching boldly. The Holy Spirit gave the apostles courage to proclaim the gospel even when they faced threats and persecution. For example, Peter and John continued preaching about Jesus despite being ordered by the authorities to stop. This relates to the scenario where Jesus also demonstrated boldness when the teachers of the law accused Him of blasphemy. He did not fear their opposition but continued teaching and demonstrated His authority by healing the man.

The apostles demonstrated God's power through overcoming opposition. The apostles remained firm even when religious and political authorities opposed their ministry. For example, the apostles were imprisoned and beaten because of preaching about Jesus, but they continued proclaiming the gospel. This relates to the scenario where Jesus also faced opposition from the teachers of the law after forgiving the man's sins and instead continued with his work.

The apostles demonstrated God's power through preaching forgiveness and salvation. The apostles continued proclaiming that people could receive forgiveness of sins through faith in Jesus Christ. For example, Peter preached repentance and forgiveness of sins to the people at Pentecost. This relates directly to the scenario where Jesus first addressed the man's sins by declaring his sins forgiven.

The apostles demonstrated God's power by bringing people to praise God. The purpose of God's power was not to glorify the apostles themselves but to lead people to recognize and praise God. For example, after the lame man was healed, he entered the Temple walking and jumping, and praising God. This relates to the scenario where the crowd was amazed and praised God after Jesus healed the paralyzed man.

The Bible describes Moses as very humble, humbler than anyone else on the face of the earth (Numbers 12:3). One day, while Moses was taking care of the flock of his father-in-law, Jethro, the priest of Midian, he led the sheep across the wilderness and came to Mount Sinai (Horeb), the mountain of God. There, the Angel of the Lord appeared to him in flames of fire from within a bush. Moses noticed that although the bush was on fire, it was not burning up. As he went closer to look, God called to him from the bush, saying, 'Moses! Moses!' Moses replied, 'Here I am.' God said, 'Do not come any closer. Take off your sandals, for the place where you are standing is holy ground.' The Lord continued, 'I have indeed seen the misery of my people in Egypt. I have heard them crying out because of their slave drivers, and I am concerned about their suffering. So now, go. I am sending you to Pharaoh to bring my people, the Israelites, out of Egypt.' Moses asked God, 'Suppose I go to the Israelites and they ask me, 'What is His name?" 'Then what shall I tell them?' God answered, 'I AM WHO I AM. This is what you are to say to the Israelites: 'I AM has sent me to you.' (Exodus 3:1-14). Similarly, Psalm 22 records David's cry of anguish while expressing unwavering trust and reverence for God through different forms of worship. Modern Christians are therefore encouraged to respond to God's call with reverence, obedience, commitment, and sincere worship.

TASK:

- (a) Examine the attributes of God revealed in Exodus 3:1-14 and explain how these attributes inspire modern Christians to remain committed to God.
- (b) Examine the forms of worship in Psalm 22 to guide modern Christians to remain committed to God

Possible responses on item 3a

God is holy and pure. God commanded Moses to take off his sandals because the ground he stood on was holy, demonstrating His absolute separation from sin and unrighteousness. This inspires modern Christians to remain committed to God by approaching Him with respect and living holy lives.

God is omniscient. This means that God is all-knowing; for example, He revealed to Moses that He had seen the misery of the Israelites in Egypt and heard their cries of anguish. This encourages modern Christians to stay committed in prayer, trusting that God is fully aware of their hardships and will act on their behalf.

God is compassionate and loving toward His people. In the text, God expressed deep concern about the suffering of the Israelites and initiated a plan to rescue them from Egyptian slavery. This divine compassion inspires modern believers to remain devoted to God and show similar love and empathy to the oppressed in their communities.

God is self-existent and eternal. When Moses asked for God's name, God declared His name as "I AM WHO I AM," signifying His unchangeable, eternal, and self-sufficient nature. This eternal attribute gives modern Christians unwavering confidence to stay committed to God, knowing He is timeless and dependable across all generations, unlike human beings and earthly things that change.

God is faithful to His covenant promises. God identified Himself as the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, reminding Moses of the ancient covenant He made to deliver their descendants. Recognizing God's covenant faithfulness inspires Christians to remain committed to their vows, trusting that God always fulfills His promises.

God is all-powerful and sovereign over nations. God appeared to Moses through the burning bush, which was on fire but was not consumed. This demonstrates God's supernatural power over nature and circumstances. This inspires modern Christians to remain committed to God because they believe that nothing is impossible for Him.

Possible responses on 3b

There is prayer as a form of worship. Psalm 22 opens with a psalmist crying out in deep pain yet directing his anguish straight to God in personal prayer. This form of worship guides modern Christians to pour out their honest feelings and struggles directly to God during trials rather than turning away from faith.

There is praise and testimony as a form of worship. David promised to proclaim God's name to his brothers and praise Him in the midst of the congregation. This practice guides modern Christians to openly share testimonies of God's goodness during church services to encourage fellow believers.

ITEM 4

In Uganda, freedom of worship is guaranteed by the constitution, allowing individuals to practice their faith openly without discrimination. Apostle Simon established a Church in one of the cities of Uganda, with the primary goal of teaching Biblical principles, moral discipline, and personal responsibility. His teaching attracted educated professionals and individuals who appreciated his intellectual approach to Christianity. As the Church progressed, his ministry stood apart from others because of his strong views regarding miracles and supernatural manifestations. He often taught that miracles do not automatically establish the true identity of Jesus. He said many reports of healing attach less consideration to the good news proclaimed. He discouraged discussions about miracle experiences within his congregation, claiming that it was not applicable to contemporary society. He openly criticized ministries that emphasized signs and wonders, saying it has no impact on people's faith, and frequently emphasized that God's love is only revealed through Christ's death on the cross. However, over time, the persistent criticism of miracles caused many believers to question whether God still works supernaturally. Many believers grew reluctant to share experiences of God's intervention in their lives publicly. Church members became more focused on intellectual discussions than reaching out to believers with the message of salvation. Members spent more time analyzing theological issues than supporting those in need. The gospel increasingly became presented as a philosophy of life rather than a message about a living savior. Some Christians became reluctant to pray boldly for the sick or those facing impossible circumstances. Contemporary Christians are encouraged to uphold both sound doctrines and active obedience to all aspects of Christian teachings for quiet evangelism.

TASK:

- (a) Examine the significance of miracles in the gospel of Mark to inform Apostle Simon in the scenario above to carry out effective evangelistic ministry.
- (b) Contrast the activities of the Early Church Christians with those of the Christians presented in the scenario above.

Possible responses 4a

Miracles demonstrated the authority and power of Jesus Christ. In the gospel of Mark, miracles showed that Jesus possessed divine authority over sickness, nature, demons, and even death. For example, Jesus healed a paralysed man, calmed the storm, and raised Jairus' daughter. Therefore, Apostle Simon should recognise in his teaching that God's power can still work through Christians by healing diseases and setting people free.

Miracles revealed Jesus' compassion and concern for human suffering. For instance, Jesus healed a leper, healed many sick people, and restored the man with the withered hand. These acts showed that Jesus was concerned not only with preaching but also with people's physical and emotional needs. Apostle Simon should therefore teach his congregation that effective evangelism involves both proclaiming salvation and responding to people's needs rather than analysing theological issues.

Miracles helped people recognise that Jesus is the promised Messiah. Jesus demonstrated authority over demons, sickness, nature and death. For example, when Jesus calmed the storm, the disciples asked, "Who is this? Even the wind and the waves obey him!" (Mark 4:41). The miracle caused them to reflect more deeply on Jesus' identity. Therefore, Apostle Simon should accept miracles but teach believers to evaluate supernatural claims according to Scripture and whether they point people towards the true Christ.

Miracles strengthened people's faith in Jesus. In Mark, people who witnessed Jesus' miracles often responded with amazement and faith. For example, after Jesus healed the paralysed man, the people glorified God (Mark 2:12). Apostle Simon should restore confidence in prayer and encourage believers to trust God because He is a miracle worker.

Miracles demonstrated the presence and advancement of God's kingdom. Jesus's authority over demons, disease, and nature showed that God's rule was breaking into human circumstances. For example, Jesus' casting out of demons demonstrated his authority over evil powers. Apostle Simon should teach that Christianity is not merely a system of ideas or a philosophy of life but a relationship with the living God whose kingdom is active in the world.

Possible responses on 4b

The Early Church Christians actively preached the gospel. They were committed to spreading the message of Jesus Christ to other people. For instance, after Pentecost, Peter preached to the crowd, and about three thousand people accepted the message and were baptised. In contrast, Christians in Simon's church have become more concerned with analysing theological issues than reaching people with the message of salvation.

The Early Church Christians prayed boldly and depended heavily on it. In Acts 4:23–31, believers prayed together after facing threats from the authorities, asking God for boldness to continue preaching. This contradicts Christians in Simon's congregation who have become reluctant to pray boldly for the sick and people facing impossible circumstances because of the persistent criticism of miracles.

The Early Church demonstrated God's power through signs and wonders. Acts 3 records Peter healing a man who had been unable to walk. These signs attracted attention to the apostles' message about Jesus. This contradicts the scenario in which Apostle Simon discourages discussions about miracles and teaches that they do not apply to contemporary society; as a result, members have become uncertain about whether God still works supernaturally.

The Early Church combined preaching with practical care for one another. Believers shared their possessions and provided for those who had needs, especially the widows and orphans. This contradicts the scenario where church members spend more time analysing theological issues than supporting those in need. This shows a separation between their intellectual knowledge and practical Christian service.

The Early Church viewed Christianity as a message about the living Christ, where they boldly proclaimed the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. For example, Peter told the crowd that God had raised Jesus from the dead and called people to repentance and faith. In contrast, the scenario states that the gospel is increasingly presented as a philosophy of life, which weakens the evangelistic character of Christianity because people may hear good moral ideas without being confronted with the message of salvation through Christ.

The Early Church openly testified about God's works. Peter and John declared that they could not stop speaking about what they had seen and heard. Their personal experiences of Christ strengthened their witness. In contrast, believers in Simon's congregation have become reluctant to share experiences of God's intervention because miracles have been persistently criticised.

The Early Church used both word and action in evangelism by demonstrating God's love through healing, sharing resources, caring for the needy and supporting one another. Their faith was therefore visible in both what they said and what they did. In contrast, members in Simon’s church are increasingly involved in discussions about theological issues but are less involved in helping people, praying for the sick, and reaching out to those who need salvation.

The Early Church depended on the Holy Spirit for effective ministry. They received the Holy Spirit at Pentecost and were empowered to witness Christ. The apostles depended on God's power as they preached, served, and faced opposition. This contradicts the scenario where the church has become heavily centred on intellectual understanding, while supernatural dependence on God has been weakened.

Mr. Korin was posted to Bugamba parish, Rwampara District. Initially, the community welcomed him warmly and presented him with many gifts. They expected him to bring peace and spiritual guidance to their community. However, as time went on, they realized that his leadership was very different from what they had hoped for.

Whenever people approached him with their problems, he simply sent them away and advised them to go and report the cases to the political leaders, claiming he was always busy with his personal business outside the church. As a result, disputes increased within the community, and many people stopped attending church.

During the election period, he openly supported one of his wealthy friends for the position of district chairperson. He threatened church members that those who failed to vote for his preferred candidate would be denied Holy Communion and participation in church activities. This was despite knowing that the candidate was dishonest and irresponsible.

After assuming office, the district chairperson imposed new taxes on the people of Mwizi because they had not supported him, claiming that the money would be used to improve the Ruti - Mwizi road. He instead used the money to buy cows and contribute money to the traditionalists who had given him charms to use during elections.

All leaders, both religious and political, should seek God's wisdom in order to promote peace, justice, and prosperity in society while practicing servant leadership.

TASK

- a) Examine Samuel's leadership approaches as a priest to guide the religious leader in the scenario above towards servant leadership rooted in faith.
- b) Analyze King Saul's leadership styles that are similar to those of the political leader in the scenario above to guide Ugandan political leaders for servant leadership.

Possible responses on item 5a

Samuel served God faithfully from an early age. Samuel was dedicated to God and served under Eli at the sanctuary at Shiloh. His leadership was rooted in commitment to God rather than personal interests. Korin should prioritize serving God and the Christian community instead of being preoccupied with his personal business outside the church.

Samuel listened and responded to God's call. When God called Samuel, he responded, "Speak, for your servant is listening "this meant that a faithful leader should be willing to listen to God and follow His guidance. Korin should seek God's guidance before making decisions concerning his congregation instead of neglecting people who come to him with problems.

Samuel guided people back to God. Samuel instructed the Israelites to abandon foreign gods and return to the Lord with all their hearts, and this meant that religious leadership involves helping people strengthen their relationship with God. Korin should provide spiritual guidance to the people of Bugamba instead of simply referring every problem to political leaders.

Samuel interceded for the people through prayer. When the Israelites were threatened by the Philistines, Samuel prayed and offered a sacrifice to God on their behalf, and this shows that a servant leader should stand with people during difficult situations and seek God's intervention on their behalf. Korin should pray with and for community members facing disputes and difficulties rather than sending them away.

Samuel promoted peace and reconciliation. Samuel judged Israel and helped restore order after the Israelites turned back to God. This shows that religious leaders should use their position to resolve conflicts and promote peaceful coexistence. Since disputes increased under Korin's leadership, he should actively mediate conflicts and reconcile community members instead of ignoring their problems.

Samuel exercised justice without favoritism. Samuel travelled around Israel judging the people and administering justice. This shows that a servant leader should treat people fairly regardless of their wealth, status, or political connections. The leader in the scenario should treat all Christians equally without favoring wealthy individuals or using church privileges to support particular political interests.

Possible responses on item 5b

Saul used his position for personal interests. He became concerned about maintaining his position and became hostile toward David when he realized that David was becoming popular, especially after killing Goliath. Ugandan political leaders should use public office to improve people's welfare rather than punishing communities for political reasons and protecting personal interests.

Saul was jealous of those who appeared more successful than him. He became jealous when women praised David more highly than him after their military victories. This shows that jealousy in leadership can create unnecessary conflicts and cause leaders to undermine others. Ugandan political leaders should cooperate with other leaders to develop their communities instead of having jealousy and competition.

Saul abused his authority to pursue opponents. Saul repeatedly used his position and soldiers to pursue and attempt to kill David because he was becoming more popular than him. Leaders who misuse authority create fear and insecurity among those they are supposed to serve. Ugandan leaders should create peace, unity, and harmony among citizens instead of using their positions to intimidate, harass, or punish citizens because of political differences.

Saul made decisions out of anger and revenge. He became extremely angry with David and attempted to kill him with a spear. Leaders who allow emotions to control their decisions can harm innocent people and destabilize society. Ugandan political leaders should control anger and resolve political disagreements through dialogue rather than revenge, intimidation, or punitive policies.

Saul disobeyed God's instructions. Saul failed to completely obey God's command concerning the Amalekites and spared King Agag and the best animals. Leadership without obedience to moral and divine principles can lead to abuse of authority. Ugandan political leaders should make decisions according to justice, honesty, and the law rather than according to personal interests and will.

Saul was more concerned with pleasing people than obeying God. He admitted that he had feared the people and obeyed their voice when he spared the Amalekite animals. This shows that Leaders who prioritize popularity can compromise principles to maintain support. Ugandan political leaders should make decisions that promote the long-term welfare of citizens instead of making irresponsible promises or decisions simply to win votes.

Saul acted impulsively without proper consultation. Saul made an oath that his soldiers should not eat until evening, which weakened them during battle. This shows that poorly considered decisions can negatively affect the people under a leader. Ugandan political leaders should consult citizens and relevant experts before introducing policies such as taxes or development programs.

In Uganda, every person has the right to practice any religion and manifest such practice. This has influenced many Ugandans to engage in the religion of their choice as they exercise their constitutional rights.

In Rwentobo Town Council, Ntungamo District, Western Uganda, a predominantly Catholic community, a group of youth, despite strong opposition from committed Catholics, started their own church because they considered Catholic styles of worship to be boring. They selected Mr. Byaruhanga as their leader because he was the only member with a university degree. However, he finds it difficult to communicate effectively on many occasions due to the big number of people in the church, especially elders, who question the source of his teachings because they find out that it's their first time listening to them. Most of the people who come to this church receive deliverance, hence causing some community members to fear the God that these people pray to. The Sunday services usually last for only one hour as the boys prefer that people go back to their daily activities. This has led to an increase in the number of Christians, hence forcing them to open up another branch in Ishaka Town. This expansion has made it difficult for him to personally baptize and pray in the two churches on a daily basis. Consequently, the church council appointed another pastor to assist him whenever he was unable to minister in Ishaka. However, members of the new church branch always dodge prayers when the head pastor is absent on some Sundays, claiming that the appointed pastor may not possess enough spiritual power because they have never heard him speak in tongues. This disagreement has led to conflicts, which have resulted in fights and injuries among members. One of the injured members has reported the matter to the police. Since the church is mainly composed of young, educated, and working-class members, overnight prayer meetings are organized to allow them to pray and ask questions, especially the medical interns at Kampala International University who have continuously doubted and openly denied the physical resurrection of believers because they do autopsies on the dead bodies, wondering how such a person can resurrect. After overnight prayers, some of these students pass through Ishaka Town, where they engage in buying prostitutes. For effective ministry, Church leaders and believers should ensure orderly worship and Christian maturity for the growth of the Church.

TASK

- a) Examine Jesus' methods of conveying His message in the Gospel of Mark to guide Mr. Byaruhanga in Christian evangelism.
- b) Analyze Paul's teachings to the Church of Corinth to guide the new church presented in the scenario above in Christian witness.

Possible responses for item 6a

Jesus used parables to communicate complex truths. Jesus used parables such as the Parable of the Sower to teach people about the Kingdom of God and their response to God's word. Parables used familiar situations to make spiritual truths easier for ordinary people to understand and remember. Mr. Byaruhanga should use simple stories and familiar examples when teaching the elders and other members instead of relying on complicated theological language.

Jesus used miracles to demonstrate God's power and support His message. In Mark, Jesus performed miracles such as healing the paralyzed man, calming the storm, feeding the five thousand, among others. His miracles attracted attention, met people's needs, and demonstrated that His message came with divine authority. Since many people in Byaruhanga's church are attracted by deliverance, he should ensure that spiritual experiences are accompanied by proper teaching about God rather than allowing miracles alone to become the basis of faith.

Jesus used questions to stimulate people's thinking. Jesus frequently asked questions, for example, "Who do people say I am?" and "But who do you say I am?" Questions encouraged people to think critically and personally engage with His message. Byaruhanga should ask the congregation questions during sermons and Bible studies, especially when introducing teachings that are unfamiliar to them, so that elders and other members can understand and discuss them.

Jesus taught according to the level of understanding of His audience. Jesus explained His teachings to the crowds through simple illustrations and later explained some matters privately to His disciples. This enabled different groups of people to receive God's message according to their ability to understand. Byaruhanga should revise his communication to different groups in the church by using simpler explanations for people who may not have formal education, rather than assuming everyone understands his university-level reasoning.

Jesus used Scripture to support His teachings. Jesus frequently referred to the Old Testament, for example, when discussing the matter of divorce, the greatest commandment, and the resurrection. Scripture gave authority and credibility to His teachings. Byaruhanga should clearly base his teachings on Scripture and explain the biblical basis of unfamiliar teachings so that elders and relatives do not question where his teachings originate.

Jesus used practical demonstrations and examples. Jesus used a child to teach His disciples about humility and greatness and used a coin to teach about responsibility to God and government. Practical illustrations helped people connect spiritual principles with everyday life. Byaruhanga should use practical examples from family life, work, relationships, and community situations when preaching so that his congregation can relate his teachings to their daily lives.

Jesus communicated through personal interaction. Jesus interacted personally with individuals such as Bartimaeus, the rich man, and the paralyzed man. Personal interaction enabled Jesus to understand people's needs and respond directly to them. Byaruhanga should not depend only on public preaching. He should directly interact with members by counseling them, especially elders and those who question his teachings, so as to understand their concerns and build trust.

Jesus taught through dialogue and discussion. Jesus engaged people in discussions on issues such as fasting, the Sabbath, divorce, and the resurrection. Dialogue allowed misconceptions to be challenged and gave people an opportunity to seek clarification. Byaruhanga should create opportunities for members to ask questions about his teachings since many of them are hearing some teachings for the first time.

Possible responses on item 6b

Paul teaches Christians to maintain unity in the Church. Paul condemned divisions among the Corinthians, where believers identified themselves with different leaders such as Paul, Apollos, Peter, and Jesus. Paul taught that Christians belong to one body and should not allow personal loyalties to divide them. The new church should pursue unity as one Christian family and stop allowing disagreements over the pastor, tongues, and spiritual powers.

Paul teaches Christian leaders to work together for the sake of Christ. Paul taught that both he and Apollos were servants through whom the Corinthians came to believe. He taught that Christian leaders have different roles, but God is the one who gives growth. The pastors in the new church should work together instead of competing over who has greater spiritual power or who can perform more miracles.

Paul teaches that Spiritual gifts should be used for the benefit of the Church. Paul taught about spiritual gifts such as tongues, prophecy, healing, and knowledge. He said that Different gifts come from the same Spirit and are intended to benefit the whole body of Christ. Members should accept the new pastor and stop judging him as spiritually weak simply because he does not speak in tongues, because the absence of one particular gift does not mean that a person lacks the Holy Spirit.

Paul teaches that Love is more important than other spiritual gifts. Paul taught that without love, speaking in tongues, prophecy, knowledge, and even great acts of sacrifice are worthless. He said that Genuine Christian maturity is demonstrated through love rather than through spectacular spiritual experiences. The members should replace their arguments over tongues and spiritual power with love, patience, and respect for one another, thereby preventing conflicts and violence.

Paul teaches that Worship should be orderly. Paul instructed the Corinthians that everything in worship should be done properly and in an orderly manner. He said that Christian worship should promote understanding, peace, and edification rather than confusion. The new church should establish clear procedures for prayers, preaching, tongues, and other spiritual activities so that there may be order in worship.

Paul teaches that Christians should believe in the resurrection. Paul strongly defended the resurrection of the dead, teaching that if there is no resurrection, Christian faith and preaching are futile. He said that resurrection is central to Christian faith and gives believers hope beyond physical death. The church should teach the medical interns about Christian resurrection using Scripture and reason instead of allowing their scientific understanding of dead bodies to make them reject the Christian doctrine.

Paul teaches that Christians should maintain sexual purity. Paul condemned sexual immorality among the Corinthians and instructed Christians to flee sexual immorality. He said that the Christian body belongs to Christ and should therefore be used in a way that honors God. The students who attend overnight prayers but later buy prostitutes should be taught that Christian worship must be accompanied by morally upright conduct and advised to flee sexual immorality.

God promised Abraham that the Israelites would be taken into slavery, and this happened in Egypt under Pharaoh, where the Israelites suffered as they were subjected to forced labor. They cried out to God, who called Moses through the burning bush incident (Exodus 3) to deliver the Israelites from Egyptian bondage, which Moses did by leading them through the Red Sea to the desert. The Israelites were required to make a covenant with God at Mount Sinai. After the covenant was made, the commandments were placed in the Ark of the Covenant. The Ark always moved ahead of them to guide them. When they reached a place called Taberah, the people began to complain to the Lord about their hardships. The Lord became angry and sent fire that destroyed part of the camp. During their journey, they lacked food, and because they were travelling with many foreigners, they developed a strong craving for meat. This caused the Israelites to complain to the Lord, saying that in Egypt they used to eat meat and fish whenever they wanted. Because of this ingratitude, God allowed poisonous snakes to bite them. When they approached Canaan, the Lord instructed Moses to send spies to explore the land. Moses obeyed and selected spies from the different tribes of Israel. When they returned, they reported that the land was very fertile and even brought back some of its fruits. However. They also reported that the people being giant, which spread fear among the Israelites. This biblical text teaches Christians to always call upon God when faced with challenges because He can deliver them from every form of suffering. God is universal, powerful, and faithful.

TASK

- Analyze the nature of man portrayed in the text above to guide modern Christians to remain committed to God.
- b) Examine Job's response to suffering to guide Christians faced with similar challenges as those presented in the biblical text above to maintain a worship-centered lifestyle.

Possible responses item 7a

Human beings are forgetful of God's goodness. The Israelites quickly forgot how God had delivered them from slavery in Egypt and began complaining about their difficulties in the wilderness. Modern Christians should remember God's past faithfulness instead of allowing present problems to make them abandon Him.

Man is often ungrateful. Although God provided manna for the Israelites, they complained that they wanted meat and fish, which they used to eat while in Egypt. This teaches Christians to appreciate what God provides rather than constantly comparing their lives with what they previously had or what others possess.

Man is prone to complaining when faced with suffering. The Israelites complained about hardships, lack of food, and the conditions of their journey. Christians today may also complain when prayers seem unanswered, or life becomes difficult. This guides them to respond to difficulties through prayer, patience, and faith in God.

Mankind can easily lose faith when confronted by challenges. The Israelites became frightened when the spies reported that Canaan was inhabited by powerful people and giants.

Christians should therefore lift their eyes to God instead of looking at the size of their problems.

Mankind can easily be influenced by negative reports. The Israelites were influenced by the frightening report about the inhabitants of Canaan, despite knowing that God had promised them the land. Christians should carefully evaluate negative information and remain guided by God's promises rather than by fear.

Solution on item 7b

Job worshipped God even after losing his possessions. After losing his wealth and children, Job tore his robe, shaved his head, and worshipped God. This shows that suffering did not destroy his relationship with God. Christians facing challenges/ setbacks should continue praying and worshipping God instead of abandoning Him.

Job accepted that human beings experience both good and bad things. When his wife challenged his faith, Job acknowledged that people should accept both good and difficult experiences from God. Christians should therefore remain faithful to God even during difficult seasons.

Job refused to curse God and remained committed to God. Despite his painful circumstances, Job did not respond by rejecting God. Christians who face sickness, poverty, bereavement, failure, or disappointment should guard against anger leading them to abandon their faith.

Job maintained his integrity in God. Job continued to regard himself as innocent despite the accusations and pressure from his friends. This teaches Christians to maintain righteous behavior even when suffering makes them question why God has allowed their situation.

Job openly expressed his pain to God. Job refused to pretend that everything was fine. He honestly expressed his frustration, confusion, and suffering before God. Christians can therefore take their fears, questions, and pain to God through prayer rather than suppressing them or turning away from Him.

Job believed that God remained sovereign. His response after losing his wealth and children shows recognition that God remains greater than human circumstances; he openly said that God gave him and has now taken; may His name be praised. Christians facing situations beyond their control, like hunger, the death of loved ones, among others, should continue acknowledging God, keeping in mind that their problems do not make God powerless.

Job maintained hope in God. Even during his suffering, Job expressed confidence that his Redeemer lived. Christians should therefore maintain hope in God when circumstances appear hopeless rather than allowing despair to destroy their faith.

ITEM 8

In Uganda today, some leaders do contrary to what people voted them to do. Unlike Ugandan leaders, "Solomon did not force Israelites to work for him as slaves. They served instead as soldiers, government officials, officers, captains, chariot commanders, and cavalry officers. There were 550 supervisors in charge of Solomon's workforce. After Pharaoh's daughter moved from the City of David to the palace Solomon had built for her, Solomon completed the construction of the terraces. Three times a year, Solomon offered burnt offerings and fellowship offerings on the altar he had built to the Lord, and he burned incense to the Lord. After completing the temple, King Solomon also built a fleet of ships at Ezion Geber, near Elath on the shore of the Gulf of Aqaba, in the land of Edom. King Hiram sent experienced sailors with Solomon's men to serve on the ships. They sailed to Ophir and brought back to Solomon about sixteen tons of gold" (1 Kings 9:22–28, GNB). On the other hand, "Eli's sons were worthless men who had no regard for the Lord or for the priests' share of the sacrifices. When anyone offered a sacrifice, the priest's servant would come with a three-pronged fork while the meat was still boiling and plunge it into the cooking pot. Whatever the fork brought up, the priest would take for himself. This is what happened at Shiloh to all the Israelites who came there to worship. In addition, even before the fat had been burned as an offering, the priest's servant would come to the one making the sacrifice and say, "Give me some meat to roast for the priest. He won't accept boiled meat from you, only raw meat. If the man answered, "Let the fat be burned first, and then you can take whatever you wish," the servant would reply, "No! Give it to me now, or I will take it by force." (2samuel2:12-16)

Task

- Evaluate King Solomon's leadership style that leaders today ought to adopt for service to humanity in light of 1 Kings 9:22-28
- (b) Analyze the leadership of Eli's sons to guide people who want to become leaders

Possible responses 8a

Solomon demonstrated an organized style of leadership by assigning people different responsibilities in the kingdom. According to 1 Kings 9:22–28, the Israelites served as soldiers, government officials, officers, captains, chariot commanders, and cavalry officers, while supervisors were appointed over the workforce. This shows that Solomon understood the importance of organizing people according to their responsibilities and abilities. Leaders today ought to establish effective administrative structures and appoint qualified people to different positions instead of appointing people simply because they are relatives, friends, or political supporters.

Solomon demonstrated commitment to the development of his kingdom by completing important construction projects. The passage shows that Solomon completed the construction of the terraces and undertook major projects such as the temple and the palace. This demonstrates that effective leadership should be demonstrated through practical achievements rather than promises alone. Leaders today ought to develop plans and ensure that those plans are implemented for the benefit of society.

Solomon promoted economic development through trade and international cooperation. Solomon built ships at Ezion Geber and worked with King Hiram, whose experienced sailors helped Solomon's men to travel to Ophir and obtain gold. This shows that Solomon understood the importance of trade, skills, and cooperation in strengthening the economy of his kingdom. Leaders today ought to adopt this approach by promoting agriculture, industries, trade, tourism and investment so that citizens can obtain employment and improve their standards of living.

Solomon cooperated with other leaders and made use of their skills and experience. King Hiram provided experienced sailors to work with Solomon's men, showing that Solomon was willing to cooperate with others in achieving his objectives. Good leadership requires cooperation because no leader possesses all the knowledge and skills needed to develop a country. Leaders today should therefore cooperate with other leaders, professionals, private organizations, and development partners instead of believing that they can solve every national problem alone.

Solomon demonstrated a sense of responsibility by supervising the workforce under his administration. The passage mentions supervisors who were responsible for overseeing Solomon's workforce. Supervision enables a leader to know whether assigned duties are being properly performed and whether resources are being used correctly. Leaders today ought to regularly monitor government programmes and projects to ensure that public money is properly used and that projects are completed according to the intended standards.

Solomon recognized the importance of serving God while exercising political authority. The passage states that Solomon offered burnt offerings and fellowship offerings to the Lord and burned incense to Him. This shows that Solomon recognized God in his leadership and worshipped Him. Leaders today ought to recognize that leadership carries moral and spiritual responsibilities.

Solomon's leadership shows the importance of using national resources for the advancement of the kingdom. The construction activities, administration, and trading activities demonstrate that resources were being mobilized to strengthen the kingdom. A good leader should regard public resources as belonging to the people and should use them responsibly. Leaders today ought to avoid corruption, embezzlement, and misuse of public property because government resources are meant to serve citizens rather than enrich individual leaders.

Possible responses on item 8b

Eli's sons demonstrated corrupt leadership because they abused their positions for personal gain. Eli's sons were worthless men who had no regard for the Lord and who took meat from sacrifices for themselves. Instead of using their priestly positions to serve God and the worshippers, they used them to satisfy their personal desires. This teaches aspiring leaders that public office should not be used as a means of becoming wealthy or acquiring personal property at the expense of citizens.

Eli's sons demonstrated greed because they took more than what was rightfully meant for them. The passage describes how the priest's servant took meat from the cooking pot using a three-pronged fork. Their behaviour shows that they were not satisfied with what they were legitimately entitled to receive. People who want to become leaders today should avoid greed by accepting only the salaries, allowances, and benefits provided by law and refusing to take public resources for personal use.

Eli's sons placed their personal interests above the interests of the people they served. The priests were supposed to serve God and assist the Israelites in worship, but they were more interested in obtaining meat for themselves. This represents selfish leadership in which the leader's welfare becomes more important than the welfare of the people. People who want to become leaders should instead prioritize citizens' needs, such as education, healthcare, roads, security, and employment, rather than concentrating on their own wealth and privileges.

Eli's sons used intimidation and force instead of treating people with respect. When people refused to give them the meat immediately, the servant threatened to take it by force. This shows that their authority had become a tool of oppression. People who want to become leaders should not use their positions to threaten, intimidate, or silence citizens who disagree with them; instead, they should use dialogue, persuasion, and lawful procedures when dealing with people.

Eli's sons showed disrespect for God despite holding religious positions. The Bible says that they had no regard for the Lord. Their position as priests did not make them good leaders because their behaviour contradicted the responsibilities attached to their office. This teaches people seeking leadership that good leadership must be supported by good character, integrity, and respect for God and humanity.

Eli's sons lacked integrity because their behaviour was contrary to their responsibilities. As priests, they were expected to guide people in worship and demonstrate holiness, but instead they exploited the people who came to worship. Integrity requires a leader's actions to agree with the values and responsibilities of the position held. Those seeking leadership should therefore ensure that their actions match the promises and principles they present to voters during elections.

Eli's sons damaged the trust of the people through their misconduct. People came to Shiloh to worship God, but the behaviour of Eli's sons made the worship system corrupt and exploitative. When leaders behave badly, people lose confidence in the institutions they represent. People seeking leadership should understand that if they fail to fulfil their election promises or misuse public resources, citizens may lose trust in their leaders and government institutions.

In Kasese District, a deeply religious Christian community living along the banks of River Nyamwamba was devastated in May 2020 when the river burst its banks due to torrential rains. Violent flash floods swept through the valley, destroying entire homesteads, washing away businesses, and displacing thousands of residents into temporary displacement camps. The displaced residents, led by a local catechist named Mr. Baluku, who lost his livelihood, his home, and two of his daughters in the raging waters, began to openly question their faith. "If God cares for us, why did He let the waters destroy everything we worked for?" they questioned. A section of the community claimed that the disaster was a divine punishment for their hidden sins, mirroring the arguments of Job's friends. Amidst the despair, self-proclaimed spiritual diviners and traditional rainmakers emerged in the camps. They argued that the river spirits were angry due to neglected cultural rituals and demanded animal sacrifices and monetary offerings to calm the waters. Out of desperation and fear, many camp residents began consulting them. Clergy and local leaders visited the camps to comfort the displaced. They drew parallels to the Exodus, reminding the community how God parted the Red Sea, sustained the Israelites with manna in the wilderness, and faithfully guided them out of Egyptian oppression to the Promised Land. They urged the residents to look at the endurance of Job, who maintained his righteousness through absolute ruin and was ultimately rewarded. Though international organizations like Save the Children and Care International set up clean water points, distributed relief items, and offered trauma counseling, many survivors withdrew from communal prayers, declaring, "God has turned His back on us."

Task:

(a) Using the Israelites' Exodus experience, explain how the people in the scenario above can be given hope and renewed faith in God.

(b) Examine the similarities between Job's situation and the suffering experienced by the people in the scenario above.

Item 1(a) possible responses

(a) Using the Israelites' Exodus experience, explain how the people in the scenario above can be given hope and renewed faith in God.

God delivers His people from difficult situations. In the Exodus, God parted the Red Sea to save the Israelites from the pursuing Egyptian army when they were trapped. The displaced residents of Kasese should find hope in God through continuous prayer, knowing that He can make a way out of their current misery in the camps.

God provides for the physical needs of His suffering people. During the Exodus, God sustained the Israelites with manna from heaven and water from the rock when they were hungry and thirsty in the wilderness. The survivors can rely on God to provide food and clean water to them, even using organizations like Save the Children to meet their needs hence enabling them to remain hopeful in God.

God listens to the cries of those who suffer. When the Israelites were at the Red Sea, they cried out after noticing the terrifying Egyptian army pursuing them, and God helped them by parting the sea to save the Israelites from the Pharaoh's army. The people of Kasese should continue to cry out to the Lord through prayers for Him to intervene in their situation instead of withdrawing from communal prayers.

God guides His people to a better future. God faithfully led the Israelites through the scary wilderness and brought them safely into the Promised Land. The survivors should have faith and trust that God will guide them out of the displacement camps and help them rebuild their lives and homes.

Item9. (b) Possible Responses

(b) Examine the similarities between Job's situation and the suffering experienced by the people in the scenario above.

Job suffered the sudden and painful loss of his children. In the Bible, all of Job's seven sons and three daughters died unexpectedly when a violent wind from the desert destroyed the house they were in. Similarly, in the scenario, Mr. Baluku faces the painful loss of his two daughters who were washed away by the flash floods.

Job lost all his wealth, property, and source of livelihood. Job's oxen and donkeys were stolen by Sabeans, his sheep were struck by lightning, and Chaldean raiders attacked his camels, among others, which left him in misery. Similarly, the residents of Kasese experienced absolute ruin as the floods destroyed entire homesteads and washed away their businesses.

Job was falsely accused of sinning by his close friends. Job's friends Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar argued that his great suffering was a direct punishment from God for the hidden sins he had committed and therefore urged him to admit and repent, though he kept on insisting that he was righteous. Similarly, a section of the community in Kasese claimed that the floods were a divine punishment for their own hidden sins.

Job questioned God and felt completely abandoned during his suffering. In his deep pain, Job openly questioned why he was born and why God had let him suffer, yet he was righteous and wondered why the wicked continued to prosper. Similarly, the survivors in Kasese openly questioned their faith and withdrew from prayers, declaring that God had turned His back on them.

In many growing towns in Uganda, business is booming, and churches are packed every Sunday. On the outside, people look successful and very religious. They organize big church events, give loud testimonies, and compete to donate the highest amounts of money to show everyone how blessed they are. However, behind this religious display, there is a lot of wickedness in the community. Wealthy traders and landlords cheat and mistreat the poor. Market vendors use fake weighing scales to trick customers and make quick money. Poor laborers are underpaid, and when they try to get help from the law, rich people use bribes to change court decisions, leaving widows and the poor without justice. The rich live in luxury, spending heavily on parties, while totally ignoring the starving families living in the slums around them. This behavior is exactly like the sins that Prophet Amos preached against in Israel. The people are pretending to love God through rituals, but their hearts are full of greed and cruelty toward the poor.

Task:

(a) Examine Prophet Amos' teaching to guide the people in the scenario above

Item2. (a) Possible Responses

Amos spoke strongly against dishonest business and cheating. He said that God hates fake weighing scales, bad measures, and tricking the poor just to make more money (Amos 8:5). Business owners and market traders in the scenario should use correct scales, charge fair prices, and treat customers honestly.

Amos condemned mistreating and exploiting poor people. He was against those who sold good people for money and the needy for a pair of shoes, showing that they did not care about human life (Amos 2:6). In the scenario, rich people and traders should pay their workers well and help those in need instead of mistreating them.

Amos condemned bribery and unfair court systems. He blamed leaders who took bribes and refused to give fair judgments to innocent people and widows (Amos 5:12). The rich people in the scenario should express integrity and honesty in courts of law instead of bribing officials and influencing court decisions so as to enable the poor and widows to get justice.

Amos condemned hypocritical worship. He said that God hates religious festivals, loud singing, and expensive offerings if the people are living wicked lives (Amos 5:21-24). The people in the scenario should start treating others fairly so as to attract God's blessings instead of trying to impress others with big donations and loud testimonies.

Amos condemned a life of luxury built on greed and selfishness. He spoke against those who lived in comfortable mansions, slept on expensive ivory beds, and enjoyed the best food and wine while ignoring the ruin of society (Amos 6:4-6). The wealthy people in the scenario should use part of their wealth to help the starving families in slums so as to help them improve their standard of living. Helping others will help the rich also to attract God's blessings.

Amos warned that God will punish those who refuse to change their wicked ways. He reminded the people that because of their stubbornness and disobedience, God would bring judgment and disaster upon them (Amos 4:11-12). The corrupt leaders and traders in the scenario must recognize that their bad actions have spiritual consequences and should urgently turn away from their sins of cheating customers, exploiting workers, living a luxurious life, among others, so as to escape God's wrath.

In Kyenjojo District, a newly established Christian community was growing fast, but the believers soon began facing bitter disagreements within their families and church. Many newly converted Christian wives were constantly arguing with their non-Christian husbands, treating them with disrespect because they felt spiritually superior. At the same time, some Christian husbands were harsh to their wives, treating them like property and ignoring their feelings. This caused constant fights in many homes. In the workplace, several young Christians who worked as laborers on large tea estates became rebellious. They insulted their bosses and refused to do their duties, claiming that because they were saved, they were free from earthly authority. Quite unbothered by the true character of the followers of Christ, a group of selfish members joined the church. They refused to share their food with others, ignored the poor and widows, and even demanded money before helping fellow Christians who were sick. This approach has led to neglect of the weak and vulnerable, leaving ordinary church members burdened by greed and widening division, without any gesture of regret or repentance from the culprits. This scenario is a reminder that Christian relationships are not about rivalry, pride, or selfishness, but about accountability before God and responsibility to society. Just as Apostle Peter warned the early Christians, today's believers must recognize that true faith is expressed through humility and mutual respect. Such church members and workers in Uganda are called upon to reflect and draw lessons from the lifestyle and communal love exhibited by the Early Church.

Task:

(a) Examine Apostle Peter's teaching on relationships to guide the families and workers in the scenario above on how to live in harmony.

(b) Evaluate the lifestyle of the Early Church believers to help selfish church members in the scenario above to serve God and people better

Item11 (a) Possible responses

(a)Examine Apostle Peter's teaching on relationships to guide the families and workers in the scenario above on how to live in harmony.

Peter teaches wives to submit to their husbands. He writes that wives must submit to their husbands so that if any of them do not believe God's word, the conduct of their wives will win them over without any words, as they see how pure and reverent their lives are. Christian wives in Kyenjojo district should respect their non-Christian husbands so that their peaceful homes can attract their husbands to Christ instead of arguing with them and disrespecting them.

Peter advises wives to strive for inner beauty. He notes that a woman's beauty should not consist of outward things, but should be the inner beauty of a gentle and quiet spirit, which is of great value in God's sight. Wives in the scenario should show gentleness and patience toward their non-Christian husbands instead of boasting about being saved while causing chaos at home.

Peter advises husbands to respect their wives. He instructs husbands to be considerate in their living with their wives and treat them with respect as the weaker sex, but equal heirs of God's gift of life, so that nothing will hinder their prayers. Christian husbands in Kyenjojo district should love, honor, and care for their wives as equals before God instead of treating them like property or abusing them.

Peter teaches workers to respect their masters and perform their duties faithfully. Peter advises servants to submit to their masters with all respect, not only to those who are good and kind, but also to those who are harsh. The rebellious young workers on the tea estates should return to work instead of insulting their bosses to receive God's blessings, since He loves the humble and obedient.

Peter advises believers to follow Jesus Christ's example of enduring suffering without seeking revenge or hurling insults. Peter explains that Christ suffered for us and left an example for us to follow, for when He was insulted, He did not insult back, and when He suffered, He did not threaten. Estate workers in the scenario should endure difficult working conditions with patience and respect, rather than shouting back at their employers or rebelling.

(b) Evaluate the lifestyle of the Early Church believers to help selfish church members in the scenario above to serve God and people better

The Early Church believers lived in deep unity and shared all their belongings so that no one was left in need. The believers continued together and shared everything they had by selling their property and possessions and distributing money to all according to their needs. Selfish church members in the scenario above should open their hearts to freely share with those who are struggling, like the poor and widows, instead of hoarding food and resources for themselves.

The Early Church established organized care systems to ensure that widows and vulnerable people received daily help. When the Greek-speaking Jews complained that their widows were being neglected, the apostles chose seven spiritual men to make sure everyone was cared for fairly (Acts 6:1–6). Therefore, selfish Christians in the scenario should create organized programs to support the poor, widows, and the weak to improve their welfare, rather than ignoring them in their time of need.

The Early Church offered help and healed the sick freely without demanding money or reward. Peter told the lame beggar at the temple gate that he had no silver or gold, but gave what he had by healing him in the name of Jesus Christ. Selfish church members in the scenario should pray for and serve others out of pure Christian love instead of demanding payment before helping the sick.

The Early Church maintained high standards of honesty and punished greed and hypocrisy severely. Ananias and Sapphira died because they lied to the Holy Spirit by greedily keeping back part of the money while pretending to give everything. Selfish church members in the scenario should repent immediately of their greed and hypocrisy so as to serve God and humanity with honest and humble hearts.

“MAY GOD BLESS US ALL”
